MME. JANAUSCHEK PROTESTS

Objects to Madeline Pollard's "Invading" the Stage.

Will Invoke the Professional Woman's League's Aid.

Mme. Janauschek, the eminent tra-Mme. Janauschek, the eminent traggedienne, is furious to the point of effervesence. She has bubbled over, and the effects of her wrath will undoubtedly make themselves felt. She is going to make themselves felt. She is going to contain a crusade against Madeline Pollard as an actress, and she intends invoking the aid of the good ladies of the Professional Woman's League, who dealt so summarily with the imaginary case against Victory Bateman. When Mme. Janauschek read the announcement of Miss Pollard's contemplated starring tour she was so angry that she rent the newspaper in twain. (Ordinary people tear a thing: tragediennes rend it in twain.) "So she is going to invade the stage, is she?" said Mme, Janauschek to a gentleman who called upon her Sunday morning. "My indignation is uncontrollable, as I ennes rend it in twain.) "So she she so there, is a blushing bloss as lating to invade the stage, is she?"

said Mme, Janauschek to a gentleman who called upon her Sunday morning.

"My indignation is uncontrollable, as I think of it. The announcement is an insult to the womanhood of our profession. I want to denounce the men who have charge of her tour, and who disnife the stage of her tour, and who disnife the stage of the tour, and the stage of the tour think of it. The announcement is an insult to the womanhood of our profession. I want to denounce the men who have charge of her tour, and who dignify themselves by the name of managers. Their action is simply a dastardly affront to the drama. What is the stage coming to? I have watched with disgust the success of prize-fighters, of bruisers, and of women who have gained notoriety through scandalous divorce cases, and through intrigues which have been used as capital to increase their drawing value to the public. I have said nothing. I have seen it all as an autonished spectator. The time has come when some one must speak, and if no one else will I will. I should very much slike to have this woman hissed off the stage if she ever comes to New York, but it would be more effective if she were prevented from getting time at a New York theatre. I shall certainly endeavor to dissuade any reputable actress from supporting her. I'm going to enlist the services of the Professional Woman's League. My sisters there will join me. I know."

The members of the League, by the bye—bless 'en are entered.

The members of the League, by the bye-bless 'em-are going to take lessons in mending dresses, making buttonholes and cutting out underwear from Miss Dorothy Johnson. The lessons will be continued throughout the Winter, and will take place every Monday afternoon. A little shiny dime is all the remuneration asked by Miss Johnson. Picture the chubby soubrettes, the simple, domesticated leading ladies, and the dear little ingenues sitting in a row and merrily singing a "Stitch, stitch, torus, as they ply their needles usefully. What a pretty and a chesring sight."

The fashion set by the acrobats in "A span of Life," where three supple gentlemen link themselves together and form a living bridge, is going to be followed closely by the imitative playwrights this season. In "The Life Guard" at Niblo's next week there will be a living ladder in this style, and in "The Crossroads of Life" there will be another. They will be so general before the season closes that the tank, the locomotive and the real stamboat will be hafted as novelties once again.

I. Walter Kennedy, the strong man the threatens to present a play called samson," arranged by William Dean to veils, declares that he is going to smonstrate his right to the little of trong man by litting mortgages off pera-houses. (See the joke?)
